Welcome

Dear Participants of the Fourth Annual Transatlantic Business Conference,

Is this really it? A G-20 summit at which Angela Merkel and Barack Obama agree to disagree on key issues of economics and policies. A financial market reform, in which European nations continue down individual paths while remaining silent with respect to transatlantic coordination. And an environmental policy that seems to be characterized attempts to limit by local damages and by global helplessness.

This can't be all there is – and it isn't. Admittedly, domestic politics seem to dominate the scene on both sides of the Atlantic. However, a great deal of what appears to be a national issue is, in fact, a joint challenge. How can a health care system be built that is fair, efficient and fiscally viable? How can countries secure their energy supplies without making themselves vulnerable to geopolitical or ecological dependencies? How can governments stimulate the economy without increasing federal deficits beyond sustainable levels? And how can future systemic crises within the financial sector be avoided, without overly restricting banks?

And indeed: even with current politics conveying a contradictory impression, the transatlantic dialogue continues unwaveringly on – in government commissions and work groups, on a personal, corporate and organizational level.

The Fourth Annual Transatlantic Business Conference aims to underline these points through enlightening keynote speeches, panel-discussions with prominent officials and in-depth workshops. During these events, we hope to offer strategic inspiration as well as motivation and ideas for daily business operations and provide possibilities for the extension of personal interaction on a transatlantic level.

We hope that in its fourth year the conference will once again be an inspirational, successful and enjoyable time, one which underscores the relevance of the transatlantic relationship in economic areas. We would like to express our gratitude once more to our co-organizers, supporters and contributors from both sides of the Atlantic, without whom the conference would not have been possible.

Evening program and reception in the Commerzbank Tower

Where has the ambition gone?

Whether it be the oil crisis, national security or health care reform – the political agendas on both sides of the Atlantic are dominated by domestic issues. In comparison, the list of transatlantic initiatives in 2010 remains short and fragmented. Common financial market regulation is moving further into the distance, economic and monetary policies are becoming points of conflict, and many geopolitical questions remain unanswered. Where has the initial enthusiasm after the election of Barack Obama gone? Where have the ambitions of Germany and Europe to influence the global agenda in partnership with America gone? Do times of crisis force a return to the national? And where could new transatlantic impulses arise in the future?

Welcome

Dr. Eric Strutz
Chief Financial Officer,
Commerzbank AG

Eric Strutz has been a member of the Commerzbank AG Board of Managing Directors since April 2004. Strutz holds a doctorate in business administration and began his career at The Boston Consulting Group in 1993, where he became vice president, director and partner in 2000. A year later, he joined Commerzbank. There Strutz served as executive vice president of strategy and controlling until 2003 when he became chief financial officer.

Speakers

Hans-Ulrich Klose, MP
Vice Chairman, Committee on Foreign Affairs, German Parliament

Hans-Ulrich Klose was appointed coordinator for German-American cooperation by the German federal government in 2010. He is vice chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs in the German parliament and has been chairman of the German-American Parliamentary Group since 2003. Klose served as mayor of the Free and Hanseatic City of Hamburg. He later became chairman of the SPD parliamentary group and treasurer of the SPD. From 1994 to 1998, he served as vice president of the German Parliament.

Friedrich Merz
Chairman, Atlantik-Brücke e.V.,
Partner, Mayer Brown LLP

Friedrich Merz is chairman of the Atlantik-Brücke e.V. and partner at the international law firm Mayer Brown LLP. He heads the firm's Berlin office and also serves on Mayer Brown's international Partnership Board. He concentrates his practice on corporate matters, including mergers and acquisitions, and finance law. Merz was the economics and finance expert for the CDU, and has been a member of the German parliament from 1994 to 2009. He was chairman of the CDU/CSU parliamentary group from 2000 to 2002.

Bruce Stokes
International Economics
Columnist, National Journal,
and Fellow, German Marshall
Fund

Bruce Stokes is the international economics columnist for National Journal, a monthly columnist for the European Voice in Brussels and a transatlantic fellow at the German Marshall Fund (GMF). He is the author of the 2009 analysis of GMF's Transatlantic Trends Survey. Stokes also is co-author of "America Against the World: How We Are Different and Why We Are Disliked." Stokes is member and former senior fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations.

Jürgen R. Thumann
President of BusinessEurope,
Vice President of BDI
and Co-Chair of TABD

The former president of the Federation of German Industries became president of the European industry and trade association BusinessEurope in 2009. He also represents the EU's businesses as co-chair of the TransAtlantic Business Dialogue. Trained in wholesale and foreign trade, Thumann took over his parents' business at age 19. In 1978 he founded the Heitkamp & Thumann Group where he serves today as chairman of the Advisory Board. In 2009 he also took over the majority of Heitkamp Bau and became chairman of its Supervisory Board.

Opening address

Philip D. Murphy, US Ambassador to Germany

In August 2009 the US Senate confirmed Philip D. Murphy as the US Ambassador to Germany. From 1993 to 1997, Murphy headed the Frankfurt office of Goldman Sachs in Germany, overseeing all of the investment bank's activities in central Europe. Following his long career at Goldman Sachs, Murphy served from 2006 to 2009 as national finance chair of the Democratic National Committee. After leaving this position, he became a principal of Murphy Endeavors, LLC. He has also been co-chair of a task force at the Center for American Progress and the Institute for America's Future. Murphy graduated from Harvard University with an A.B. in economics and received an M.B.A. from The Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania.

Dinner Speech

Prof. Dr. Axel A. Weber, President of the Deutsche Bundesbank and Member of the Governing Council of the ECB

Axel Weber has served as the president of the German Central Bank since 2004, which includes oversight in the areas of communication, economy and research as well as responsibilities on the Bank's Advisory Board, Board of Directors and a governor position with the International Monetary Fund. Weber has held professorial positions in the areas of international economics and financial studies and has been a visiting fellow at several institutions, including the IMF and Brookings Institution in Washington, D.C. Since 1990, Weber has been a research fellow at the Centre for Economic Policy Research in London.

Growth models at the crossroads

Rarely do the basic foundations of economic policy stand in such opposition to one another as they did at the last G-20 Summit in Canada: The US wants to use government means for as long as possible to support the fledgling recovery, while Germany warns of unsustainable public debt and wants to reduce government aid sooner rather than later. The divergence points towards an underlying conflict that has become more pronounced during the crisis: what is the right balance between consumption and exports? Is austerity a virtue or a vice? Is Germany a role model or a freeloader in the global economy? And according to which model of growth should we construct our national economies in the future?

Moderator

Carsten Knop
Senior Business Editor,
Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung

Carsten Knop became an editor at the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung in 1996. He served as a business correspondent in New York from 1999 to 2001 before moving to San Francisco to report on commercial activities on the West Coast, particularly the Silicon Valley businesses. In the spring of 2003, he returned to the newspaper's main office in Frankfurt.

Speakers

Hans W. Reich
Global Chairman, Public Sector
Group and Chairman of the Supervisory Board for
Citigroup Global Markets
Deutschland AG

Hans Reich is chairman of the supervisory board and the public sector group of Citigroup Global Markets Deutschland AG. Having over 48 years of banking experience, Reich also currently holds positions, among others, as chairman of the supervisory board of Aareal Bank AG and serves as a member of the supervisory board of HUK-Coburg Versicherungsgruppe.

Peter Y. Solmssen
Member of the Managing
Board and General Counsel,
Siemens AG

Peter Solmssen is a member of the managing board and general counsel of Siemens AG. Before joining Siemens in October 2007, Solmssen held various positions at General Electric Company between 1998 and 2007 – most recently as executive vice president and general counsel of GE Healthcare in Chalfont St. Giles, UK. As a senior partner at Morgan, Lewis & Bockius LLP in Frankfurt from 1989 to 1998, Solmssen specialized in international mergers & acquisitions and securities law.

Dr. Jürgen Stark
Member of the Board of Directors, European Central Bank

Since June 2006, Jürgen Stark has been a member of the Executive Board of the European Central Bank (ECB) and honorary professor in the Economics Faculty at the Eberhard Karls University in Tübingen. From 1998 to 2006, Stark served two terms as vice president of the Deutsche Bundesbank, where he was responsible for international relations and internal auditing. During his term he also acted as a member of the Central Bank Council and was deputised for the president of the Governing Council of the ECB.

Jürgen R. Thumann
President of BusinessEurope,
Vice President of BDI
and Co-Chair of TABD

The former president of the Federation of German Industries became president of the European industry and trade association BusinessEurope in 2009. He also represents the EU's businesses as co-chair of the TransAtlantic Business Dialogue. Trained in wholesale and foreign trade, Thumann took over his parents' business at age 19. In 1978 he founded the Heitkamp & Thumann Group where he serves today as chairman of the Advisory Board. In 2009 he also took over the majority of Heitkamp Bau and became chairman of its Supervisory Board.

Energy and climate protection: The audacity of sustainability

In 2008 the Republicans in the United States launched their electoral campaign with, amongst others, the slogan “Drill, Baby, Drill!” to express their support of the US oil industry. Initially, the Democratic candidate Barack Obama also only half-heartedly advocated moving American energy supply in a truly new direction. Since the catastrophe in the Gulf of Mexico, the picture has radically changed. Deepwater Horizon serves as a symbol for energy issues around the globe. Is it possible to reconcile supply security and ecological compatibility? Does the price of energy really reflect its costs and risks? And which energy sources and consumption patterns are sustainable for the future?

Moderator

Dr. Günter Burghardt
Former EU Ambassador to the United States, Senior Counsel, Mayer Brown LLP, Brussels

Günter Burghardt has been working for the EU Commission since 1970, including as deputy chief of staff and political director since 1985, director general for external relations from 1993 to 1999 and as head of the European Commission Delegation in Washington, D.C. During this time, he has served as assistant treasurer at Exxon Ventures and held positions as treasurer and later as controller at ExxonMobil Japan. After a brief stint as assistant treasurer at ExxonMobil Chemical Company, Wechsler joined ExxonMobil Central Europe, where he currently is a member of the board, business services manager and treasurer.

Matthias Willenbacher
CEO, juwi group

Matthias Willenbacher founded the company juwi together with Fred Jung in 1996. The two executives have turned the initial two-man office into a leading international project developer of renewable energy systems with more than 900 employees and about 900 million euro in earnings (guideline for 2010). Willenbacher, a physicist, and Jung, an agricultural economist, aim to establish a purely renewable energy supply.

Financial market regulation: More questions than answers

Who still remembers Pittsburgh? It seemed then that governments would find a collective answer to the turbulences in the financial markets. These hopes have all but disappeared. The interdependencies render themselves ever more complex, individual preferences prevail in many countries, and it is widely felt that financial markets shape their own regulation. Time has come for a frank discussion: what can be regulated, what not? And do new rules merely create new loopholes?

Moderator

Alison Smale
Executive Editor,
International Herald Tribune

Alison Smale joined the IHT in 2004 from The New York Times, where she had been deputy foreign editor since 2002. Before joining the Times in 1998, she had served nearly 12 years as AP bureau chief in Vienna, covering eastern Europe. Before that, she worked for four years in the Soviet Union, writing about the transition from Brezhnev to Gorbachev. Smale was in New York on Sept. 11 and organized much of the prize-winning New York Times coverage of the war in Afghanistan and the later war in Iraq.

Dräger Foundation:Future energy – Supply security, risk management & ecological sustainability

The world's energy usage will most likely double by the year 2050. How can this growing need for energy be guaranteed to be economically – and at the same time socially and ecologically – viable? What kinds of new energy will dictate our future and which risks and opportunities are inherent in new technology – especially risky technologies like deep-sea drilling? How will potential risks be incorporated into future energy costs? And what should international crisis-management of environmental protection look like?

PricewaterhouseCoopers:Transatlantic tax strategies – New trends or old wine in new wineskins?

Despite the increasing importance of other geographic marketplaces, US investments in Europe, as well as an increasing volume of European investments in the US, continue to be of utmost importance for the economies on both sides of the Atlantic. The workshop will discuss strategic aspects of structuring transatlantic inbound and outbound investments in the current economic environment. Key factors to be considered are the recent series of revised US-European tax treaties, as well as national tax developments in the US and important European marketplaces.

Deloitte & Touche GmbH: Sustainable prosperity – Success factors for a new era

New products and processes, as well as changes in society's values, decisively influence our economic behavior. As a consequence of resource scarcity and climate change, sustainable prosperity and the corresponding search for innovative products and business models are increasingly becoming the focus of economic policy objectives. Within the context of this new paradigm, the opportunities and challenges on both sides of the Atlantic will be examined in this workshop with particular respect to renewable energy.

Genworth Financial:Retreating welfare systems: How are traditional roles changing?

Discuss with an expert how, as a result of the economic crisis, governments are now focused on austerity measures and are unable to provide welfare support as they have in the past. Increasingly the burden is being passed to businesses who are required to provide more generous benefits, but it is also more likely that consumers will have to carry more of the burden through private provision. What are the roles of the state, businesses and individuals in terms of welfare support after the financial crisis?

Moderator and speaker

Jones Day: Global IP portfolio management – Opportunities and challenges

In a globalized economy, IP portfolio management is important not just for large corporations. For small and medium-sized enterprises with specialized know-how or technology, a systematic IP portfolio management is often crucial for success. The main objective of successful portfolio management should be to maximize the value of the individual property rights. The seminar explains how IP rights can be used and combined to safeguard business interests vis-à-vis (potential) infringers and competitors. Major differences between IP practices in the US and in Europe will be highlighted.

Moderator and speakers

Oliver Passavant
Partner, Jones Day

Oliver Passavant is partner in the Frankfurt office of Jones Day, after having worked for more than 10 years in the US.

Dr. Andreas Ebert-Weidenfeller
Partner, Jones Day

The speakers are both experienced IP lawyers. Dorothee Weber-Bruls is a German and European patent attorney, whereas Andreas Ebert-Weidenfeller is a German attorney-at-law. Both have been practicing IP law for 18 years and are partners at Jones Day. Weber-Bruls heads the patent practice of Jones Day in Frankfurt and lectures on patent law at the University of Frankfurt. The IP Practice at Jones Day combines both IP prosecution (acquisition of IP rights) and IP litigation (enforcing IP rights) and is international in its outreach. It is also well-equipped to cover all aspects which are related with IP rights, such as anti-trust or regulatory issues.
